Course Curriculum

Recently, The Joint Commission (TJC) and the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) announced their commitment to driving health equity. These new requirements include the expansion of the collection, reporting, and analysis of standardized data. Hospitals and health systems should prepare now to meet these new requirements.

During this webinar, Shawn Rossi, DHA, FACHE, will cover the upcoming deadlines and reporting requirements for both Joint Commission and CMS reporting. She will address how community health needs assessments can be used to set strategic direction for the requirements and offer additional resources to help hospitals get ready for the new requirements.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this session, participants should be able to:

- Describe the new health equity-related requirements for the Joint Commission and CMS.
- Assess hospital readiness to meet the new Joint Commission and CMS requirements.
- Outline sources for data, including hospital community health needs assessments, for health equity reporting.
- Describe how to assess and analyze your patients' social risk factors and how these needs evolve over time.
