The importance of communicating with your legislators

Have you ever wondered why your legislators voted counter to your position on an important bill? Bad legislative decisions are not necessarily evidence of malice against a particular group or industry. More likely, poor decisions stem from a lack of knowledge or a misunderstanding of the consequences of certain legislative actions. This is where you, the citizen lobbyist, can make a difference!

Legislators make decisions based on their core beliefs, on their knowledge of an issue, on input from experts, on personal counsel and on feedback from their constituents.

While we cannot likely sway our legislators' core beliefs, we can have a direct impact on what they hear and what they know. If legislators have the facts and understand how their decisions will affect your hospital, patients, staff and community, then we are more likely to be successful. When our legislators cast their votes, they will understand the consequences of their decisions.

Personal visits and meetings

Personal contact with a legislator – whether through meetings, a hospital tour or some other means – can be the most effective way to make your case. Legislators, like everyone else, will be more likely to remember – and pay attention to – someone they have met face to face. Here's how you do it:

Request a meeting. When you contact the office of a senator, you'll probably speak to an administrative aide who handles the senator's scheduling. Explain who you are and which organization you represent. Ask to speak with your legislator directly, but assume you may deal with the aide or another staff person.

Be flexible on the timing. Remember, legislators are busy and are continuously juggling priorities. Be as flexible as possible with your time in order to make the most of theirs.

Explain the purpose of the meeting and how long it will take. If you need 20 minutes, ask for 20 minutes. If you need 10, ask for 10. Don't ask for more time than you need. Once you start the meeting, stick to your time commitment.

Confirm the meeting in writing. After you have scheduled the meeting, send an email to the legislator or relevant staff member confirming the date, time and location. This reduces scheduling errors and helps make you more visible.

Arrive early. If your legislator is running ahead of schedule, this may allow more time for the meeting. If he/she is running late, that may make him/her more attentive to your message.

Get to the point. Time matters. While exchanging pleasantries is important, get down to business as soon as possible. Make your points and then depart.

When appropriate, request feedback. Requesting feedback, such as an email or phone call, will help guarantee your concern receives more than a passing notice. While you don't want to demand a response, simply asking "Can you let us know once you have made your decision to sponsor this legislation?" should not be objectionable. Also, a meeting would be a great time to request they be your guest for a hospital tour. "Perhaps we can discuss this further when you visit us?"

Follow Up. Following up will remind your legislator of the substance of the meeting and any actions either of you promised. A letter will also serve to remind staff that follow-up actions may be required.

Hospital and community tours

Tours of your facility and community can be a very effective means of communication. A good tour will make your legislator familiar with what you do and the problems you face. Of equal importance, spending quality time with your legislator will help build a much stronger relationship than you would ever achieve through mail or over the phone.

In order to make the visit a success, you must make the most of it. Set a goal for your visit and place the right person in charge of the preparation. After your senator accepts your invitation, the following are helpful points.

Be as flexible as possible. Propose a range of dates for the visit. Legislators' schedules can change with very little notice. Find out when your legislator will be back in the district. If possible, try to dovetail your invitation with a recess day if during session.

Make the hospital visit intriguing to your legislator. Making an office visit attractive doesn't mean putting up a new coat of paint or a star spangled bunting. Legislators want to learn and they want to meet and hear from their constituents. Make sure your legislator knows he or she will meet the people who work at your location.

Be persistent. Don't give up if you are unable to work out a visit on the first try. Time pressures often force changes in the schedule and even with the best of intentions, cancellations may occur. Be gracious and understanding. Don't be afraid to reschedule!

Prepare a fact sheet about your hospital. Include important information such as number of personnel, size of payroll, amount of taxes paid, other locations, community services, awards, information about key employees and interesting facts about the care you provide. This will give your legislator a quick look at your organization and why he/she is visiting.

Set aside time for discussion. Reserve some time before or after the tour for you and possibly some other key personnel to sit down for some frank face-to-face dialogue. The only way you'll get your points across during a tour is if you have your legislator's full attention; it's hard to concentrate over the hustle and bustle of a busy hospital or clinic.

When the visit is finished, send follow-up letters. Send a letter thanking your legislator for making the visit, and use the opportunity to reinforce whatever points you made during the tour. With the vast array of information competing for your legislator's attention, you can't emphasize your positions too much.

Start an advocacy team at your hospital

You, the member, are the most important voice we have in communicating with our state legislators. Advocacy team members might include the Chief Executive Officer, Chief Financial Officer, Director of Nursing, Human Resource Director, IT Director, Vice Presidents and other directors, and leadership staff. Successful teams often involve a board member. Do not limit involvement to those positions, however. If someone is interested, encourage them to join the team. POWER IS IN THE NUMBERS!

Your hospital advocacy team is in charge of monitoring the actions of your legislator, encouraging donations to the NHA PAC, hosting hospital visits, sending letters and making phone calls to your state legislator to keep them informed on how they can be a hospital advocate. In the sections below, you will see how your advocacy team can be an effective tool in advocating for all Nebraska hospitals!

Communicate with your lawmakers. It's easier than you think. Lawmakers and their staff want to hear from you because you are a constituent. At the same time, you are an expert that represents an organization that is vital to the well-being of thousands of people in their district.

Educate your lawmakers. Lawmakers vote on legislation that is often highly complex, yet they rarely have time to review each clause in every bill. They rely on staff support, subject matter expertise and constituent contact to provide them with information on how legislation will affect their constituents – namely your patients, your community and your hospital.

Counter misinformation. The Affordable Care Act, professional liability, Medicare reimbursement, Medicaid funding, quality, coverage and access: the list of issues hospitals must grapple with every day is long and growing. Without accurate information from you and your colleagues, those who stand in opposition to hospital issues have the power to strain your resources and interfere with the delivery of care. You can counter the messages of your opponents!

Consistently, clearly and frequently tell the hospital story – your story – to your legislators. The Nebraska Hospital Association does this every day, but direct communication from hospital leaders in a legislator’s district carries significantly more weight and is almost always more effective.

Understanding the life of a legislator

Time. Elected officials are busy and time is a commodity that is in short supply, especially during the legislative session. Legislators have to write bills, speak for or against legislation, cast votes, research proposed legislation, attend committee hearings, address the press, meet with constituents, answer their mail and supervise their office staff. Legislators, like the rest of us, also have family responsibilities – birthdays to celebrate, anniversaries to remember, school plays to attend, etc. They must also travel back and forth between Lincoln and the district they represent, which for some can be challenging and time consuming.

Making good decisions. Elected officials care about their communities and they want to cast votes that will benefit their constituents and Nebraska. Because they are beset by conflicting opinions and tugged at by various interest groups, they are often unsure just what the right decisions are. They are expected to be experts on many issues, but are usually only the master of one or two. A state senator votes on hundreds of legislative bills every session and must rely on others for advice and information.

Bottom line. The bottom line is your elected officials need you as much as you need them. They need information that will help them make better decisions, those that will help you serve your community. By creating a symbiotic relationship, you can both win.

The following are five proven means of creating a productive working relationship:

1. Arrange personal visits and meetings
2. Make phone calls
3. Send letters and emails that get noticed
4. Conduct hospital and community tours
5. Engage in political action

Phone calls

Talking with a legislator on the phone is nearly as effective as a personal meeting. You'll have the legislator's full attention, at least for a while.

Here are some quick tips that will give your call more impact:

- If at all possible, talk directly with your senator.
- Always leave a message.
- Get straight to the point.
- Be willing to talk with staff members.
- Follow up your conversation with an email or letter.
- Consider your timing. Call during office hours.
- Don't pester your legislator. Call when you need to, but don't abuse the privilege. Calling too often can be counterproductive.

Letters and emails

When a personal visit isn't possible, communicate with your legislator through a letter or email. The impact of a handwritten letter has no equal. While emails may be tallied for or against a particular position, handwritten or hard copy letters almost always make it into the hands of your policymaker.

Use hospital letterhead. This lets the staffer who sorts the mail know that you are not just representing your own views, but also the interests of an important facility and hundreds, if not thousands, of constituents. Be sure to obtain the proper permission before using letterhead for official correspondence of this nature.

Personalize the letter as much as possible. If you've met your legislator recently, say so. If you have a long-standing relationship with your legislator or if you share something in common with him/her (grew up in the same town, went to the same college, etc.), reference that in the first part of your letter. You may want to add a handwritten postscript to the letter to make it more personal. Personalization may mean your letter is placed in the small pile of letters that your senator will actually read.

Get to the point. Remember, the senator receives a large volume of mail. Succinctness is a virtue. Be brief.

Limit your key points. Don't cram too much information into the letter. Explain your position as clearly as possible. If the issue is complicated, enclose additional material. Also, include your telephone number so the legislator can call you with questions.

Alert your legislator to the consequences of a vote. For example, if a "yes" vote on a measure will mean more jobs in the legislator's district, the legislator will want to know that. Conversely, if legislation will erode the quality of health care in your area, he/she needs to know that, too. If inaction on an issue will have a positive or negative effect on your patients, you must alert the legislator to that reality.

A note about email. The rules for writing good emails are the same as sending letters via "snail mail," though you need to consider that email is now often checked using a mobile device. The extra time it takes to open a message with graphics or attachments may prevent your message from being read at all. It is important to keep the format of your email as simple as possible. Depending on the senator, a staffer may read and sort this mail and only a handful of messages may get through.

Social media best practices

- There is almost no such thing as posting too often as long as your content is relevant (Twitter is an exception).
- Visuals are essential to stand out – pictures, videos, memes
- Engage in conversation – tweet directly at reporters, advocates, and decision-makers.
- Always use hashtags.
- On Twitter, less is more (280 character limit).
- Post often on different days of the week at different times of day
- Interact – make it conversational (not a monologue).
- Follow those you wish to have follow you – lawmakers, relevant health and news reporters/outlets and bloggers, other organizations.
- Follow relevant health organizations.
- Follow news, read blogs, and pay attention to what decision makers, the media and organizations are saying.
- Share the content of others who you trust.

Political action

In our system of government, many policymakers are running for re-election or election to a higher office. Since elections are always around the corner, they must continually think about earning votes, forming coalitions and raising funds necessary for a campaign. Most legislators enjoy serving in the Legislature. There are ways you can help them continue in their role, and your assistance will be appreciated and remembered.

What is the NHA PAC?

The Nebraska Hospital Association Political Action Committee (NHA PAC) supports the efforts of the NHA to advocate on behalf of Nebraska hospitals by participating in the political process. Through your contributions, the NHA PAC is able to financially support the campaigns of candidates whose philosophies, actions and voting records reflect an understanding and concern for hospital and health care issues, regardless of political affiliation.

NHA PAC is a fund supported through contributions of hospital administrators and staff that are then distributed to those individuals running for office identified as recognizing the importance of health care in Nebraska. Every year, decisions are made in Lincoln and Washington, D.C., that determine the future of Nebraska hospitals. There are champions of our issues – elected officials who have a passion and understanding for the unique role hospitals play in ensuring the quality of life in their communities.

Term limits also diminish the number of hospital and health care champions in office. The NHA PAC works to identify new champions with each election. We want potential officeholders who are engaged in positive health care discussion and willing to learn about the issues hospitals face in their communities every day. As with any dichotomy, not everyone embraces the importance of effective health care policy. It is essential for hospitals and health systems to have a strong and united voice in the political, legislative and regulatory arenas.

The mission of the NHA PAC is to ensure that, with each election, we can strengthen the presence of champions for health care amongst our state and national lawmakers. The NHA PAC and AHAPAC (American Hospital Association Political Action Committee) offer an opportunity for individuals to be involved in our state and federal political process. The NHA PAC supports the efforts of the NHA and its members to advocate on behalf of Nebraska hospitals by participating in the political process.

Who can participate in the NHA PAC?

Growth of the NHA PAC begins with health care leaders – hospital administrators and the hundreds, if not thousands, of leadership staff in the hospitals across the state that make up the NHA. Hospital employees, officers, directors and stockholders, as well as members of the NHA, may contribute to the NHA PAC.

Who should I contact for more information on the NHA PAC?

For more information on the PAC, including guidelines on participation, contact David Slattery, Director of Advocacy, at (402) 742-8153 or dslattery@nebraskahospitals.org.

The legislative process

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER. It's important when talking to your legislator to understand the legislative process. On the next pages is a step by step explanation of how bills become law in Nebraska, followed by commonly used terms that will help you better understand the Nebraska Legislature and its process for considering the issues that come before it.

The need for a new law may be suggested by anyone: concerned citizens, special interest groups, state agencies, the governor, or the senators themselves. The idea must be introduced as a bill by a senator or a committee to be considered by the Legislature. A bill must follow this process to successfully become a law in Nebraska:

1 BILL RESEARCH, DRAFTING and INTRODUCTION

Research

First, a senator and his or her staff research a problem and study possible legislative remedies. A senator may introduce a bill to create a new law or to repeal or change an existing law. Legislators have staff to help with their research projects. Much of their research is done during the period between sessions, which is called the interim. During this time, legislative committees study a variety of issues that have been outlined in interim study resolutions passed by the Legislature.

Drafting

A senator brings his or her idea for a new law to a bill drafter, who works with the senator to transform the idea into the proper legal form for a bill. Unlike some states, Nebraska requires that each introduced bill contain only one subject.

Introduction

Bills are introduced during the first 10 days of the legislative session. In order to introduce a bill, a senator files it with the Clerk of the Legislature. The clerk reads the title of the bill into the record, assigns it a number, and prints copies of it for public and legislative use.

Fiscal Note

The Legislative Fiscal Office prepares budget statements that estimate the anticipated change in state, county, or municipal expenses or revenue under the provisions of each bill. These statements are called fiscal notes and each contains three estimates: one calculated by the Fiscal Office staff, another prepared by the governor's budget office, and a third prepared by the affected state agency. Additionally, the Fiscal Office prepares appropriation bills ("A bills"), which accompany bills that require an appropriation.

COMMITTEES

Every introduced bill receives a public hearing by a legislative committee. A nine-member Reference Committee determines which bills will be heard by each of the 14 standing committees. At hearings, citizens have a chance to express their opinions to the committee members. Testimony is recorded, transcribed, and made part of the official committee record. After the hearing, committees may vote to send a bill to general file with or without amendments, indefinitely postpone the bill, or take no action.

GENERAL FILE

General file is the first time the full Legislature has the opportunity to debate and vote on bills. At this stage, senators consider amendments, which may be proposed by committees or individual senators. It takes a majority vote of the Legislature--25 votes--to adopt amendments or move a bill from general file to the next stage of consideration.

SELECT FILE

Select file is the second debating and voting stage. This step allows another opportunity for amendment, compromise, and reflection. Bills on select file may be amended, returned to committee, indefinitely postponed, or advanced to the next stage, again, with a vote of 25.

GOVERNOR

After the Legislature passes a bill on final reading, it goes to the governor for consideration. The governor has five days, excluding Sundays, to act on a bill. If the governor signs a bill or does nothing with it, the bill becomes a state law. If the bill is vetoed, the Legislature may override a gubernatorial veto with a vote of 30 senators.

Most bills passed and approved by the governor become law three calendar months after the Legislature adjourns. However, bills may take effect before then if they contain an emergency clause or another specified operative date.

FINAL READING

Before final passage, bills are constitutionally required to be read aloud in their entirety by the Clerk of the Legislature, unless three-fifths, or 30 members, of the Legislature vote to waive the requirement.

A bill may not be amended or debated on final reading, but it may be returned to select file for a specific amendment.

Bills may not be voted on for final passage until at least five legislative days after the bill is introduced and one legislative day after it is placed on final reading.

Other ways to get involved with NHA Advocacy

Traditional ways of doing business in the development of health care policy are quickly becoming obsolete. Term limits in Nebraska's Legislature and health care reform, coupled with the current economic conditions, have intensified and accelerated the need for innovative and resourceful efforts that advance the NHA's advocacy agenda.

Hospital leaders must be proactive in public policy development—identifying important issues and developing strategies to address them. When Nebraska's hospitals adapt, adjust and respond to new health care policy initiatives in a timely and informed manner, they position themselves as reliable, trusted resources and empower policymakers to make informed decisions.

Effective advocacy that produces substantive change is a year-round effort. During the legislative session, NHA members and staff take active roles on numerous bills by promoting those that positively impact the delivery of health care and opposing those that would have an adverse affect on the health of the Nebraskans served by our state's community hospitals; however, there is a great deal more to be done.

The NHA encourages all of its members to participate in activities throughout the year that build stronger working relationships with those who have the power to change health care policy with their vote. Strong working relationships with legislators are the foundation for thoughtful, informed and substantive public policy changes. In cooperation with its members, the NHA staff has developed several programs and tools that hospital leaders can use to implement successful advocacy efforts.

Policy Development Committee

Each year, after the legislative session ends, the policy development process is initiated when the NHA surveys its members on state and federal issues. The Policy Development Committee (PDC), a group of more than 20 hospital executives, meets to evaluate the outcome of the annual membership survey. The PDC reviews the members' comments and prioritizes the issues. The PDC then forwards its recommendations to the entire NHA membership for review during the fall NHA district meetings. Final action on each issue is determined by the NHA board of directors each October.

Advocacy Teams: Advocacy teams are employees selected by the hospital's chief executive officer to serve as advisors, planners and active participants in the hospital's political and community advocacy efforts. The team gathers information and helps develop and implement strategies to influence policymakers at the state and federal levels. Advocacy teams also coordinate grassroots political action, such as letter writing, meetings with legislators and hosting policymakers when they visit their facility.

CEO/Policy maker Meetings: CEO meetings with state senators and members of Nebraska's congressional delegation are designed to educate policymakers about health care issues and further develop comfortable working relationships. Such meetings may take place at the hospital, Nebraska State Capitol, Washington, DC or other locations.

American Hospital Association Political Action Committee (AHAPAC) and Nebraska Hospital Association Political Action Committee (NHA PAC): Contributions to the AHAPAC and NHA PAC are crucial for electing champions of responsible health care policy. As the premier vehicle for collecting candidate contributions, the AHAPAC and NHA PAC both contribute funds to champions of health care, serving in both Nebraska and in Washington, DC.

NHA Advocacy Day: The NHA hosts its annual Advocacy Day event in the spring. All members of the NHA are invited and encouraged to attend. The agenda includes presentations on key legislative and regulatory issues, provides hospital representatives the opportunity to meet with state senators and advances the NHA's advocacy agenda during the legislative luncheon.

Weekly NHA Member Calls: Every Friday during the Legislative session, the NHA Advocacy Team provides important updates on bills and legislative proceedings. All NHA members are encouraged to join in these conversations and provide feedback.
